Bomb alert on Olympic Airline plane

A plane has landed safely at Stansted Airport in a major security alert.

RAF (Royal Air Force) planes were called in after Olympic Airline flight OA411 from Athens to New York asked to be diverted to Stansted Airport. It landed at 1529 GMT and the Royal Air Force planes have now returned to base after the incident was concluded safely. All 290 passengers and 11 crew members have been taken off the plane according to the Ministry of Defence (MOD).

The BBC's Athens correspondent Richard Galpin told BBC News 24 the incident happened after an elderly man called a Greek newspaper anonymously and told them there was a bomb on board. The paper called the police, who called the airline. An MOD spokesman said the pilot contacted air traffic controllers for help. Officials contacted the Department of Transport and then the MOD gave the go-ahead to escort the plane. The RAF is not releasing details of how many of its planes were involved for security reasons.

A spokesman for the Department of Transport said the aircraft "is on the ground and being searched. Fortunately nothing has exploded, if indeed there was a bomb on board, but we take all threats seriously."

Task 4

Read this article telling you why you should take care on Friday, 5 November. In the sentences that follow the text there are some gaps. Your job is to fill in the gaps with just one or two words. Write your answers on the dotted lines. An example has been given.

The most dangerous day of the year?

This year, 5 November falls on a Friday. If you're going anywhere, be very careful because something unpleasant is more likely to happen on this day than on any other day of the year.

5 November is the worst day for break-ins, early November has the worst statistics for road accidents, and 'fatal Friday' means that on this day of the week more serious road accidents happen than on any other days. Autumn is also the time of the year when drink-driving is at its worst. And that's not to mention any injuries from fireworks.

Big day for burglars

Burglaries increase by 25% above average on bonfire night, says the Home Office, which is warning people to make sure they secure their homes. Bonfire night provides ideal cover for break-ins. Many people are out for the evening at fireworks displays – or in their back gardens and unaware of what's happening at the front of the house. And the noise of fireworks takes away attention from burglars forcing their way into houses. Fireworks, bonfires and empty houses are an attractive combination for criminals. Burglary can often be an opportunistic crime taking advantage of an open window or unlocked door, and carried out very quickly.

'Fatal Fridays'

It's also a good idea to drive especially carefully at this time of year as road accident rates are the highest each year in November after the clocks going back at the end of British Summer Time and evenings becoming darker earlier. Adding to the danger, drink-driving is also more common at this time of year. And every Friday evening tired drivers hurrying home are particularly likely to have accidents. It's the end of a long week and people are thinking more about what they're doing at the weekend than what is on the road in front of them.

So lock up, and drive carefully.

0) In 2004 5 November falls on a Friday and this makes it the most dangerous day of the year.

21) Every year ……..…….. is the month when most road accidents happen. 21)

22) Of all the dangers mentioned in the article only ……..…….. are not connected to driving. 22)

23) On 5 November many people go out to watch the ……..…….. . 23)

24) Open windows and unlocked doors make it easy for ……..…….. to get into a house. 24)

25) The risk of road accidents is increased by drink-driving and by darker evenings after ……..…….. of British Summer Time. 25)

26) On Fridays most drivers are very ……..…….. after a long week at work and find it difficult to concentrate. 26)
