Task 1

Read this passage on water traffic in Venice. In the statements that follow the text some words have been left out. Your task is to fill in the gaps with maximum two words according to the information in the text. Write the words on the dotted lines. An example has been given for you.

Gondoliers cut up rough on regatta

Gondoliers have threatened to block Venice's most popular pageant, the regatta parade down the Grand Canal, in protest at powerful waves from motorised boats that they claim the local authorities are doing nothing to stop.

The gondoliers complain that their frail vessels cannot stand the buffeting from an increase in traffic ranging from the vaporetti water buses to taxis, tour boats and private launches.

Roberto Luppi, president of the main gondoliers' association, is canvassing his colleagues on a plan to halt the regatta, which is held every year on the first Sunday in September and is broadcast live on Italian television. It begins with a procession of richly decorated historic boats and is followed by two-oar "gondolini" craft rowed by expert oarsmen.

"All it would take is 300 or 400 gondolas and the whole regatta would be forced to a stop. We have to make ourselves heard, not just as gondoliers but as Venetians who defend their city," Luppi said.

The debate has been going on for decades. The number of taxis has soared since the 1960s and more recently larger boats – in addition to the regular water buses – have been allowed to carry up to 100 day-trippers from hotels and camp sites on the mainland into the heart of Venice.

As they disgorge their passengers they have to keep their engines revving at higher speeds than regulations permit or be pushed away from the landing stage, and this creates more turbulence.

Some gondoliers have developed hernias straining to keep their craft upright or to keep them from crashing into a quay. The gondolas, which used to last up to 25 years, now have a lifespan nearer 15 years.

The gondoliers want traffic police drafted in to impose speed limits and to catch boatmen ignoring one-way signs. But Paolo Costa, the mayor, argues that he is already cracking down on reckless navigation by putting up new signs, deploying more speed traps and impounding more boats.

0) The regatta in Venice is in danger of being stopped by…..…..gondoliers……..… .

1) The gondoliers think that the ……. should do more to protect them from motorised traffic. 1

Task 2

Read these passages from a daily paper and then read the statements following them. Your task is to decide which passages the statements refer to. Write the appropriate letters in the white boxes as in the example. Remember that some letters may be needed twice.

Do you believe in alternative medicine?

A

As a physicist I accept the importance of finding out how things work. As a patient, my perspective is different. Some years ago, suffering from the after-effects of shingles, I went back to my GP for stronger painkillers; he offered me acupuncture and this improved my condition about 50 per cent. Further treatments completed the cure.

B

For more than four years I have suffered from a chronic catarrh and sinus problem. My doctor prescribed several rounds of antibiotics, which had no effect. I grew increasingly intolerant of foods containing dairy and wheat products. I then had two rounds of surgery, neither of which made the slightest difference.

In April I booked a session in a natural therapy spa, described my symptoms and had a diagnosis with a candida infection. I was put on a strict anti-fungal diet, supported by homeopathic treatments. In less than three months my catarrh massively reduced and I have been able to reintroduce wheat into my

C

I am a fully qualified holistic therapist and feel insulted by the term "alternative medicine". I consider alternative medicine to refer to Chinese herbs and other concoctions. Complementary therapies – which include reflexology, massage and meditation – are becoming more accepted by the medical profession. These treatments can now be found in hospices and doctors' surgeries.

D

I read with interest the article by Professor Raymond Tallis, in which he said that alternative therapies have no basis in science.

Does this mean that unless science, as we know it today, is unable to qualify the reasons for a turnaround in an individual's symptoms then, scientifically, no improvement occurred? I would agree that conventional medicine cannot be disregarded. But I suffered from a serious disease for 34 years, and it was alternative medicine that caused it to regress. Now I

E

There is no such thing as alternative medicine. There are alternative treatments, but these are not medicine, which is based on empirical knowledge. Alternative medicines do not pass scrutiny, and it is therefore unhelpful even to use this term. Of course, it suits the practitioner to be called alternative consultants, because that gives them a false legitimacy and equivalence with medical practitioners.

F

I know many homeopaths, herbalists and acupuncturists who are minting money from this unregulated profession and causing unnecessary harm to the public. It is time the Government regulated alternative medicine.

0) This letter was written by a scientist but gives a patient's viewpoint.

7) This person objects to the term 'alternative' which has negative connotations and suggests that another name should be used.

8) In this particular case the family doctor used an alternative therapy when conventional therapy wasn't effective enough.

9) This person respects conventional medicine but questions the view that alternative medicine should be rejected on scientific grounds.

10) Physicians and surgeons were unable to cure this person.

11) Stricter laws would be needed to protect people from bogus practitioners.

12) The writer of this letter says 'alternative medicine' doesn't deserve the name 'medicine'.

13) Many alternative practitioners are interested only in financial gain.

14) Conventional medicine does not reject all forms of holistic medicine.

Task 3

Read this passage about a new type of charity work, and then read the statements following it. Your task is to decide if the statements correspond to what the article says.

- If they say the same as the article, mark them A.
- If they say something different, mark them B.
- If what they say is not mentioned in the article, mark them C.

Write the letters in the white boxes. There is an example for you.

Executives volunteer their hard-nosed business skills

Entrepreneurs, top executives and City professionals are paying £1,000 a year for the privilege of being a member of the Pilotlight Club, a charity that matches talented businesspeople with small charities that need their particular skills and expertise.

The club, which has 100 members, was started on 16 June 2003 by Jane Tewson, one of the co-founders of Comic Relief, to harness the business skills of volunteers to help 12 promising charities, both new and established.

The minimum effort required from members is just two hours' voluntary work a month, which appeals to busy executives who want to give more than money but cannot make an open-ended commitment.

This was ideal for Garret Turley, a 36-year-old vet who bought his first surgery with a friend in 1998. Now their Pet Doctors chain comprises 23 surgeries around the South East, and turned over £9 million last year.

"I wanted to help people who hadn't had the same good fortune as myself, but I didn't want to spend Saturday afternoons shaking a box collecting money outside Sainsbury's," he says. "This is flexible, you can be upfront about what you can and can't do, and it's focused. You're going in, doing a job and getting out."

Sam Berwick, 43, who is a managing director of Mizuho International, the investment banking arm of Japan's biggest bank, agrees: "Pilotlight gave me an opportunity to make more than a financial difference."

Pilotlight's charities are as varied as the executives working for them. For example, Headway helps young men with acquired brain injuries to readjust to family and working life, while the TreeHouse Trust educates children with autism. Praxis works with refugees, asylum seekers and migrants.

Pilotlight carefully matches its volunteers to the charity they can best assist after a thorough assessment of the charity's needs. Fiona Halton, the managing director of Pilotlight, estimates that the volunteers have given more than £100,000 in professional advice over the past year.

0) In return for an annual fee, Pilotlight Club finds its members some unpaid work.

15) Pilotlight wants members to work for two hours or more every month.

16) Being a busy man, Garret Turley finds the terms of the club suit him.

17) His friend and Pet Doctors partner is more interested in money than he is.

18) Being a banker, Sam Berwick wants to help people by giving them money.

19) Praxis helps people, often from developing countries, who want to live and work in Britain.

20) Over the past year Pilotlight volunteers have donated a huge sum of money (over £100,000) to various charities.

ADOLESCENT LAZINESS BIOLOGICAL

I sure could have used a study like this when I was a kid. A new report in the Journal of Neuroscience (0) _____ that adolescent laziness may be determined by human biology. Researchers found that the section of the brain associated with drive and motivation is (1) _____ developed in teens than in adults. Ah, so this explains the blank stares I get (2) _____ I ask my 13-year-old to throw out the garbage, (3) _____ when I nag my 11-year-old to finish her book report. It (4) _____ even explain why my 16-year-old, if he has the opportunity, will sleep past noon every day of the week. On a more serious note, the new (5) _____ also shed light on why teens are prone to risky behavior. The adolescent brain, it turns out, requires a lot more stimulation (6) _____ anything registers.

Think of the (7) _____ . If adolescent laziness is rooted in body chemistry, then all of our well-intentioned parental prodding is just whistling in the wind. Sure, kids need to learn how to act (8) _____ and to develop personal motivation; they have a lifetime of duty and hard work ahead of them. But for a few precious years (9) _____ ambition may literally be unnatural – and maybe everyone would be better off if we simply (10) _____ that. So if your house is on fire and your kid still struggles to get his butt off the couch, remember, it's not his (11) _____ . It's just biology.

The "most wrinkled rockers" in music are back. The Rolling Stones last week (0) _____ that they were going on the road yet again. The Stones are the living (23) _____ that "you don't have to spend your geezer years being, well, a geezer." There's not (28) _____ mystery about it. Retirement and inactivity are out. Grandparents must now (29) _____ second or third careers, or hike the Himalayas or jump out of aeroplanes. As people live longer and longer, society is demanding that the old remain physically and mentally fit, to (30) _____ burdening the young.
