Fontos tudnivalók

- Az utasításokat pontosan kell követni. Csak az utasításban megadott helyre beírt megoldás fogadható el.
- Mindig csak egy megoldást szabad beírni.
- A betűjelek legyenek jól olvashatóak, az esetleges javítások pedig egyértelműek.
- A megadott szószámot nem szabad túllépni. Az összevont alakok egy szónak számítanak (pl. "it's" egy szó, "it is" két szó).

Task 1

- Read this article about a new piece of technology and then read the gapped summary that follows.
- Your task is to fill the gaps (1-7) with one word only according to what the article says.
- Write your answers on the dotted lines. There is an example (0) for you.

DON'T THROW YOUR BOOKS AWAY JUST YET

Electronic reading devices have the potential to reinvent a fine old technology, but they have some way to go

The book is already a highly evolved piece of technology, many claim. It is portable, shareable, easily navigable and relatively cheap. How could it be improved by making it electronic?

I love books, but I have no difficulty imagining how they could be improved. Indeed, I have been waiting for e-readers to arrive ever since I first read about them over a decade ago. Think of something like a larger, slimmer iPod Touch that could store thousands of books and dictionaries; you could download any book ever published (they would never be out of print), flick through them effortlessly and search them for that passage you can't quite remember.

Unfortunately, in the real world you are stuck with the iRex Iliad. For a start, it's a monster. It weighs in at 425g – that's roughly the same as a 700-page paperback. Writing as someone who does most of his reading on London's Tube, I must admit that fact alone would make it a non-starter. Earlier this year, I bought the Bookeen Cybook almost entirely because of its weight – a slimline 170g.

The legibility of the Iliad is excellent, it must be said. Like all the current generation of e-readers it uses a brilliant technology called eInk. This is black on white and is not backlit, which means that – like a book but unlike a laptop – you can read it in sunlight, though not in the dark. And it doesn't strain your eyes.

Unfortunately, the user's manual is a classic written-by-geeks document. For example, there is a facility on the Iliad for reading newspapers; great – how do you get them? The manual is silent. You can clearly do a lot more on the Iliad than simply read books, but you'd have to be a technical whiz to work out what.

At the moment the Iliad feels like a prototype that needs a lot more development. Whether it gets it depends on how popular e-readers become in the future – and currently the signs are not hopeful.

(The Daily Telegraph, June 7, 2008.)

Electronic reading devices need to develop further to realize their full (0) _____

The author of the article has known about e-readers for more than (1) _____ years. He says a great advantage is that, theoretically, they can make any (2) _____ text available. He finds that one big problem with the present version of the iRex Iliad is the (3) _____ . For this reason alone he would not even consider (4) _____ one for himself. A good feature, though, is the use of (5) _____ , which makes the Iliad easy to read. Some of the Iliad's additional facilities are great, but the average user would need more (6) _____ to be able to make full use of them. All in all, current trends make the author sceptical about the (7) _____ of e-readers.

TIGERS AND GORILLAS – FOR SALE ON THE INTERNET

Investigators say internet trade in endangered animals is (0) _____ and could wipe out entire species

Thousands of endangered animals supposedly (8) _____ are being traded openly on the internet and sold as "exotic pets", say wildlife crime investigators working with an international animal charity.

An investigation of nearly 100 websites (9) _____ found a "shocking" selection of rare and endangered animals for sale. They included a hand-reared Siberian tiger (£40,000), an adolescent gorilla (£4,500) (10) _____, and other rare primates, falcons, seahorses, and whole shells of turtles.

The gorilla for sale in London may not have actually existed, said an IFAW∗ spokeswoman yesterday. "Possibly it was advertised by (11)_____ which would capture an animal to order."

Guaranteed to be real, however, were the turtle-shells, shawls made from the Tibetan antelope and a stuffed tiger, (12) _____ but looking suspiciously fresh.

The internet has revolutionised shopping for books, DVDs and airline tickets, but it has also opened up great opportunities to deal in illegal wildlife, which, according to the UN, is worth billions of pounds a year and now rivals (13) _____ in scale.

"This trade has devastating implications for both wildlife conservation and animal welfare. Entire populations of certain species risk (14) _____ by overexploitation. Millions of animals suffer immensely during hunting or in transit and captivity. Many die and this results in more (15) _____ from the wild", the IFAW spokeswoman said.

Trade on the internet is easy, cheap and anonymous. It is clear that unscrupulous traders and criminal gangs are taking advantage of (16) _____. The result is a cyber black market where the future of the world's rarest animals is being traded away.

Task 3

- In this text about a recent geological discovery the first sentence of each paragraph has been removed.
- Your task is to put the sentences back into the text.

- Remember that there are two extra sentences that you will not need.

RARE GLIMPSE OF THE CRYSTAL CAVE

(0) _____ The underground chamber contains some of the largest natural crystals ever found – some of the selenite structures have grown to more than 10m long. Professor Iain Stewart got a rare glimpse of the subterranean spectacle while filming for the new BBC series How the Earth Made Us. Here he talks about the experience.

(17) _____ It's about 50°C in there, but it's the virtually 100% humidity added on top that makes it a potential killer. That combination means that when you breathe air into your body, the surface of your lungs is actually the coolest surface the air encounters. That means the fluid starts to condense inside your lungs – and that's really not good news.

(18) _____ Miners working in the Naica silver mine broke through the walls of the cavern and were astounded to discover these enormous crystals – the biggest anywhere on earth. But when the first people went in to explore, they were almost overcome by the conditions – and there's some pretty hairy video footage of them coming out of the cave on the verge of losing consciousness. So we knew the dangers were real.

(19) _____ Then there's a breathing system which feeds cool, dry air into your mask. It's OK to take the mask off for a short while, but do without it for more than about 10 minutes, and it's likely that you're going to start keeling over.

(20) _____ I was lucky of course. All I had to do was stand there and talk, but the cameraman and all the others were having to work in these conditions, wearing these cumbersome suits, and they really struggled. For them the biggest danger was falling over; rescuing someone inside would have been very tricky.

(21) _____ It's such a glorious place, it's like being in a modern art exhibit. I kept reminding myself: "You're in the Naica Cave", because there're only a handful of geologists that have ever been in there.

(22) _____ They don't make any money out of it and sooner or later, when the economics of the mine change, it will close. The pumps will be taken out, the mine and the cave will flood, and the crystals will once more be out of our reach.

(23) _____ The Earth's crust must be riddled with wonders like this. As we learn more about the crust, we can be sure that there will be discoveries even more spectacular than Naica.

(http://news. bbc.co.uk)

A) We had a doctor outside the cave to monitor our vital signs, and we were coming out of the cavern with our heart rates up at 180.

B) Perhaps we should console ourselves with the thought that there are certainly lots more crystal caves waiting to be discovered.

~~C) Mexico's Cave of Crystals stunned geologists when it was first discovered in 2000.~~

D) We kept being told how difficult it was going to be to film in the Naica Cave, but nothing really prepares you for the extremes of that cavern.

E) For starters, the geology of the area suggests that there could be more crystal caves in the area.

F) Yet for the people who own the Naica mine, the crystal-cave is a side-show.

G) Despite all the dangers, however, my overwhelming memory is the sheer beauty of the place.

H) It is an epic story of how geology, geography and climate have influenced mankind.

I) The cave was first discovered by accident.

K) You wear protective clothing, including a special cooling suit filled with ice cubes.

MONTENEGRO'S DOMAIN NAME GAIN

When it comes to top level domain names, some countries are luckier than others. Take the Pacific Ocean island of Tuvalu, for instance, which offers the attractive .tv for the broadcast media. Or Tonga, whose .to domain has given birth to sites such as go.to and how.to. Perhaps most fortunate of all in the name game is Montenegro.

After separating from Serbia in 2006, the country gained .me – the perfect domain for the social media generation. "From the beginning it was clear that .me would have its share in the market," said Predrag Lesic, executive director of the .me registry in Montenegro.

That share is now huge. Since .me went live in 2008, more than 320,000 names have been registered, making it the fastest selling debut top level domain ever. It is short, personal and popular - with names like youand.me and whatabout.me. It is being used more than anything else as a call-to-action domain, for example notify.me. The domain's popularity is partly down to its versatility across different languages.

Even before the domain's launch, Montenegro's registrars were flooded with requests for names. "There have been three development phases," said Mr Lesic. "In the first period we were receiving applications for the trademark names only. International companies like Microsoft and Samsung rushed to register their .me name. The second phase allowed local people to register an interest in a domain, while the third, go-live phase – which started on 17 July 2008 - opened up the registry to customers worldwide. On the first day of the go-live period, we had 50,000 registrations."

One buyer of the .me domain was Matt Mansell, who purchased willshemarry.me. As it turns out she did marry him – and the site was used as a way of informing guests how to get to the wedding. But, aside from his new wife, the domain name may prove to be Mr Mansell's greatest gain from his wedding. "I've had an awful lot of people who want to buy the idea; I've had people who want to buy the domain. A lot of the .me names are actually selling at online auctions for figures like $10,000-$15,000."

Although it is a very lucrative market, technology commentator Bill Thompson is not convinced with the value attached to a memorable domain name. "I'm a domain name cynic. More and more people just go to their favourite search engine, type in what they're looking for and don't actually look for where it's going. So I just don't think domain names are as important as they were. And I don't think they should be."

(http://news.bbc.co.uk)

0)	The domain name of Tuvalu appeals to television stations.	0)	A
24)	After 2006 Montenegro managed to hold on to its original domain name.	24)
25)	Montenegro domain names can function as a simple request.	25)
26)	The .me domain is less popular in other languages than English.	26)
27)	Before 17 July 2008 only local domain registrations were accepted.	27)
28)	Many of the people registering in Montenegro intended to go and live there.	28)
29)	Mr Mansell says that .me domains can be bought for $10,000 to $15,000 at the Montenegro registry office.	29)
30)	Mr Thompson is not enthusiastic about the domain business even though it is highly profitable.	30)

THE EARLY DAYS OF CARS

The first motor cars owed a lot (0) _____ the horse carriage. Indeed, many pioneering cars were simply horse carts with an engine – that is (11) _____ they were known as horseless carriages. They were notoriously unreliable. Sometimes a couple of horses were taken along as well in (12) _____ of a breakdown.

Early cars were hard to start and drive, and even harder to stop. Yet the roads were full of hazards: potholes, sharp bends, steep hills, and stray animals. Even the shortest outing in a car rarely passed (13) _____ an incident. Road signs were put up to warn drivers of coming dangers, but unwary animals and pedestrians were too often hit by speeding motor cars. (14) _____ protect people, horns and other warning devices were made compulsory.

Cars (15) _____ been restricted by speed limits right from the start. In Britain, there was the "Red Flag" Act, (16) _____ required that all cars have two drivers, while a third person walked in front waving a red flag. The world's first speeding ticket was issued in Great Britain in 1896. The driver was fined a shilling (17) _____ doing 8 mph in a 2-mph zone.

Night driving caused problems too. Lighting was (18) _____ poor that few motorists ventured out on the road after dark. The lights on the first cars were candle lamps inherited from horse-drawn carriages. They were very dim so they (19) _____ little more than warn other road users of the car's presence. Although special car lights were soon developed, they were considered luxury accessories for many years. It was (20) _____ until the 1930s that bright electric lights were fitted as standard on most cars.

Welcome to the Listening component of the Matura Examination.

The listening material and the instructions are recorded on this CD, and the tasks and instructions are printed in your test booklet.

- There will be three tasks, and every recording will be played twice.
- The tasks will begin with some music, and then you can hear (and you can also read) the instructions to the task.
- This will be followed by a silent period on the CD in order to give you some time to look at the task in your test booklet before hearing the text.
- Then we will play the recording in one piece.
- After another short silent period we will play the recording for the second time, but now in shorter sections and with breaks between the sections in order to give you enough time to write down your answers.
- You will also have some time to check your work at the end of each task.

Please note that the first item in each task (marked with a tick [✓]) is always an example.

The whole test is about 30 minutes long.

Good luck!

- In this section you will hear a strange story from a New York City policeman.
- Your task will be to decide whether the following statements are true, false or we do not know because the text does not say, and write the appropriate letter in the boxes on the right. Write A if the statement is true, write B if the statement is false, and write C if the text does not say.
- First, you will have some time to look at the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
- Then, after a short pause, you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.
- A = TRUE B = FALSE C = THE TEXT DOES NOT SAY

Task A

During your stay in the UK you receive the following advertisement from your British friend Edna, who invites you to take part in a cookery course with her:

Ashburton Cookery School

Voted 'Best Cookery School' by BBC Good Food Magazine

We offer a fresh approach to cooking with exciting cookery classes that emphasise hands-on cookery training, top quality, local, organic produce and inspirational teaching.

Working in one of two superbly equipped teaching kitchens, you will learn fundamental cookery techniques that can be applied whether you're working in a professional kitchen or entertaining at home.

Our chef tutors are highly regarded, qualified lecturers with extensive experience of working in the catering industry. They will inspire you to cook with imagination, passion and enjoyment.

http://www.timeout.com

Write a letter of 120-150 words to Edna in which you

- express surprise at her wanting to learn to cook,
- tell her what you think of learning to cook by taking a course,
- give reasons why you would or would not like to take part.

Begin your letter like this:

Task B

You have found the following problem on the Modern Morals Online forum on the internet.

> When I took a mock GCSE exam at school recently, the paper turned out to be a past paper that I had done at home as part of my revision. Since I will now probably get a very good mark for this exam, am I morally obliged to confess to my teacher (and classmates) the reason why I did so well?

Write a letter to Alicia in which you give your opinion in 200-250 words telling her about

- the difference between cheating and being lucky at a test or an exam,
- an interesting test or exam experience that you or one of your friends had,
- what she should do in this situation.

Begin your letter like this:
