Fontos tudnivalók

- Az utasításokat pontosan kell követni. Csak az utasításban megadott helyre beírt megoldás fogadható el.
- Mindig csak egy megoldást szabad beírni.
- A betűjelek legyenek jól olvashatóak, az esetleges javítások pedig egyértelműek.
- A megadott szószámot nem szabad túllépni. Az összevont alakok egy szónak számítanak (pl. "it's" egy szó, "it is" két szó).

Task 1

- In the following interview with Billy Keen, head zookeeper at the Elmwood Park Zoo in Norristown, the questions have been removed.
- Your task is to write the letters of the questions (A-K) next to the appropriate numbers (1-8).

- Write the letters in the white boxes as in the example (0).

0) _____
It'll be 2 years in July.

1) _____
It started in Scouts. I ran nature centres at Scout camps. When I was older I worked in a pet store. From age 14 on I got paid for working with animals.

2) _____
A zookeeper needs a 4-year degree in a biology-related field. I went to zookeeper school in Florida. It was a 3-semester course.

3) _____
I have eight zookeepers with interns. The interns are students working for us as part of their college training.

Taking care of the animals is a daily job. There's also repainting of buildings, sweeping walkways, picking up trash…. it's an ongoing task that never ends.

5) _____
We try to show the more unusual North American species that people wouldn't recognize. I also have a few exotic animals.

6) _____
It depends on what the animal is. Our cats get a prepared meal called Bravo. It's regular ground meat. The omnivores get vegetables with a little Bravo added. The insect eaters get live crickets and earthworms.

7) _____
It varies because of the season. It's hard to give an exact number; it really depends on the month. Most of our visitors come May-July; during the winter we don't get many people.

8) _____
There are lots of projects that we're trying to get done. The zoo is very old; we're updating parts of it. We're trying to make the zoo as interactive and fun as we can and at the same time allowing people to get educated.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF SOCIAL NETWORKING

Bottles with messages from Harold Hackett, 58, from Newfoundland, have made it to France, the United States and even Africa

It all started when Harold Hackett threw a glass Pepsi bottle with a note inside overboard while he was bored to death fishing for tuna in 1996. Since starting his message-in-a-bottle hobby, Hackett has thrown 4,871 bottles into the Atlantic. The note inside asks finders to write back to him, saying when and where they found his bottle. So far he has received over 3,100 letters, a 73.6% response rate.

"I got one note back with five different people finding it. They found it, put the message back and let it go. It started in Cape Breton and went to Nova Scotia. Then, it went to Massachusetts, North Carolina and Florida, and then the guy there wrote back to me," he says. "There were five letters in the envelope when I got it."

"I used to write all of those letters out by hand in the first four or five years," he remembers. He later had to start getting his notes photocopied. Then he entered the send-off date with a pen.

"I still have a lot of writing," he says, explaining that he writes back to everyone who contacts him with information on a found bottle.

Local fishermen often see his bottles with neon paper bobbing in the water. "The minute they see it, they don't even have to look at it. They just say, 'that's Harold Hackett,' and they throw it back in," he says smiling.

With all the bottles he's received news about, there's one bottle that still escapes him – bottle number 1 from 1996. "I've got a feeling this year will be the one," he says.

CHILD HACKERS' CONFERENCE

A new type of security problem has been found in many mobile games by a ten-year old hacker. The hacker, CyFi, gave a presentation about his findings at DefCon Kids, which held its first meeting during the larger DefCon hacker conference. The conference now has sessions for young people who are interested in trying things out in hardware and software.

CyFi found that advancing the clock on a tablet or phone, in many games, makes it possible to get access to data which are not meant for the public. He discovered the bug after getting bored with the pace of farming games and seeking ways to speed them up.

Many farm-based games force players to wait hours before they can produce fruit or crops grown from virtual seeds. As a result CyFi, who has not revealed his real name, started manipulating the clock on his handset to see if he could make the game faster.

By disconnecting his phone from wi-fi and only advancing the clock by small amounts, he found the game in a state not tested by its original creators. CyFi's discovery has since been inspected by independent security researchers. Exactly which games are unprotected has not been revealed, to give their creators time to fix them.

I regularly babysit three kids aged 5-8 (a boy, a girl and their friend, another girl) while their parents go out on Friday night. There's always a fight over the TV: the boy wants to watch Cartoon Network, the girl wants CSI and their friend wants House MD (the last two are rated PG). They shout and fight and I'm sure it won't be long before one of them gets seriously hurt. I have no idea what to do – can you help me? I would appreciate your ideas.

Write a comment of 100-120 words to Jody's post in which you

- say what you think of children watching TV all the time,
- give your opinion about what young children should not be allowed to watch,
- recommend two activities Jody could try with the children instead of watching TV.

Begin your comment like this:

Jody,
