- Az utasításokat pontosan kell követni. Csak az utasításban megadott helyre beírt megoldás fogadható el.
- Mindig csak egy megoldást szabad beírni.
- A betűjelek legyenek jól olvashatóak, az esetleges javítások pedig egyértelműek.
- A megadott szószámot nem szabad túllépni. Az összevont alakok egy szónak számítanak (pl. "it's" egy szó, "it is" két szó).

Task 1

- In the following interview with Fred Gitelman, whose Bridge Base Online is the largest bridge website in the world, the questions have been removed.
- Your task is to match the questions (A- H) and the answers (1-6).
- There is one extra question that you do not need.
- Write the letters in the white boxes as in the example (0).

60 SECONDS WITH FRED GITELMAN

0)*_____

When I was a teenager. It's a beautiful game. Every time you deal the cards, there's a completely new problem to solve.

1)_____

My wife convinced me that starting a software company and developing bridge software might actually work. Nobody even knew the Internet existed at that time. PCs were not household things.

2)_____

It's not an important difference for me. There was a movement to get bridge into the Olympics. That's when they started calling it both ways.

3)_____

Absolutely. People still see it as a game that one's grandmother plays. I'd really like to see our software help make the game more popular among a younger generation.

4)_____

It was a lifelong dream come true, so very exciting. But it was also extremely intense. You play eight hours a day, for two weeks. You're just sitting there thinking and thinking and thinking.

5)_____

Yes, my partner and I made a grand slam very close to the end. Our opponents were universally considered to be the best ever. It's like playing against Michael Jordan and getting a slam dunk with two seconds left.

6)_____

That's not the term I would use. I've become friends with him; we play sometimes, and he'll ask me for advice.

AMSTERDAM BY BIKE

According to Amsterdam's tourism board, the canal-crossed Dutch city is one of the most cycle-friendly places in the world, but recently locals have become less enthusiastic about the tourists that come to see Amsterdam on two wheels.

"The problem is that we Dutch are good cyclists. We're like anarchists on bikes who know how to break the rules," said Rolf Hermsen, who is one of the many city residents who use their bikes to get around. "The tourists try to keep the rules, but they can't cycle properly. They can't cycle while looking for traffic behind them, so they just fall over."

"There are people who say tourists need more instructions to ride bikes," said Jo Ligtvoeld from the Tourist Board. "More and more Dutch people are complaining about tourists. I think it's because Amsterdam is a small city compared to other European capitals."

Amsterdam also has a reputation as a "freedom city" for allowing marijuana smoking and for its red light district. The city attracts thousands of tourists each year, who are often responsible for noise pollution and garbage on the streets. The Tourist Board says that it's these visitors, rather than the cycling ones, that create the most problems with local residents.

However, when it comes to cycling, Amsterdam residents are good at spotting the tourist-on-wheels. "Tourists should, just like the locals, have lights on their bikes and follow general traffic instructions. Just because Amsterdam likes freedom, that does not mean there are no rules to be followed," Jo Ligtvoeld said.

Her solution to the conflict between visitors and residents is to attract tourists to the less busy parks and cycleways of Amsterdam's quieter suburbs. Anyway, if you do choose to cycle in Amsterdam, the Tourism Board's website helpfully explains where you can rent bikes and how to follow Amsterdam's traffic rules.

- Your task is to fill in the gaps (13-20) from the list (A-K) below.
- There is one extra letter that you do not need.

I'M THRILLED!

When the Duchess of Cambridge's first official portrait was presented to the public yesterday, art critics were, unusually, largely united in their criticism. 'Horrible ... rotten ... an out and out disaster,' was the view of Robin Simon, (0) _____ .

Kate, who was on her first official outing for almost a month, was far more polite. 'It's just amazing. Absolutely brilliant,' she told the artist, Paul Emsley, when she met him at the National Portrait Gallery, (13) _____ . Her husband, Prince William, nodded wisely. 'It's beautiful, it's absolutely beautiful,' he agreed.

From others, however, the biggest criticism seemed to be the generally ageing nature of the portrait, (14) _____ . Most seemed to think it makes the duchess, who turned 31 this week, look at least 15 years older. One visitor to the gallery yesterday couldn't get over what they described as her 'grey, smoker's skin', while another commented that her mouth appears to be set in a grimace, (15) _____ .

To be fair, royal portraiture has always been a subjective issue. Rolf Harris, (16) _____ , admitted that in the early stages he made the monarch look like a 'pork butcher from Norwich'.

Yesterday Kate and her family spent around ten minutes looking at the picture and (17) _____ , after which the media were allowed in.

Asked what the duchess thought of his work, Mr Emsley said yesterday: 'I think, from what I can see this morning, she's delighted with it. The fact (18) _____ is difficult for me as an artist. It is much easier for an artist to paint a model as a real person (19) _____ . Obviously, she has none of that. But I tried to do that with her smile (20) _____ .'

The portrait, which has probably cost over £20,000, has been donated to the gallery by art philanthropist Sir Hugh Legatt.

VIRGINIA WOMAN BUYS $7 RENOIR PAINTING AT FLEA MARKET

A woman from Virginia, who paid seven dollars for a Renoir painting at a flea market, will sell the piece this month for what should be a pretty profit. She had forgotten all about it until she recently decided to clean the house from top to bottom.

Potomack Co., the auction company, suggested that she put the painting, "Paysage Bords de Seine" by impressionist Pierre-Auguste Renoir, up for sale for $75,000 to $100,000.

Back almost two years ago, while she was shopping at a West Virginia flea market, the woman, who wants to remain anonymous, found the painting in a box of cheap junk priced at seven dollars by pure chance. When she decided to tidy her home about a week ago she unexpectedly came face-to-face with the painting again. Though the painting was signed by a certain Renoir, she didn't find this very interesting and hoped that she might be able to use its gold frame. But her mother told her to find out about the value of the picture.

"I actually listened to my mom for once," the woman said in an interview. She then contacted Potomack Co., where she showed it to Anne Craner, an art specialist.

"Clearly, it had Renoir's colours, it was the work of his brush," Ms. Craner said. She was later able to use a catalogue to show that the painting was genuine.

The lucky woman said she is still waiting for the shock to go away. "I just want to enjoy it quietly," she said.

She plans to take her mother to France after the auction and will take some flowers to Renoir's grave. "I just want to say thank you to him," she said.

Task B

Yesterday you received the following email from your 17-year-old American friend, Myra:

> One of my dreams has come true, and I'm still not entirely happy… Why does everything have to be so complicated? I need your help!
>
> Two weeks ago my friend Vanessa came up to me and told me there was an audition for a play Tuesday night (she knew how much I was interested in acting). I went there and it turned out to be a summer job: we would be performing a play for little kids in daycares and the community center. It is sort of a big time commitment with all the rehearsals and performances several times a week. I'm already cast as a character! I must say I don't even see it as a job, and even if it was unpaid I would still want to do it.
>
> So, everything is great except that since I told my mom and dad that the performances will probably take my whole summer, they behave as if I let them down. They refuse to talk to me just because we have planned a big family vacation, the last one before I go to college next year, and now I may not be able to make it. You know how close I've always been to my parents, and I don't want to be mean to them but I also feel I mustn't miss this fantastic opportunity. Am I right? What do you think?
