THANKSGIVING TRAVELLERS BRACE FOR WINTER STORM

A US winter storm is threatening to bring travel misery to the East Coast on the eve of the Thanksgiving holiday.

The system, which dumped heavy rain and snow over the region on Tuesday, has already 0) _____. Forecasters say more than 1ft (30cm) of snow could fall in western Pennsylvania, western New York and Vermont before Thursday. More than 43 million Americans are 1) _____ .

The storm is also threatening to ground the giant balloons at the Macy's Thanksgiving Parade in New York. These include balloons of beloved characters such as Mickey Mouse and the Pillsbury Doughboy. City regulations bar the inflatables from being used when 2) _____ . New York Governor Andrew Cuomo has issued a winter weather warning 3) _____ .

Meteorologists also predict the storm could bring 2-4in (5-10cm) of rain up the Atlantic coast from Richmond, Virginia, to Portland, Maine. "It couldn't have come at a worse time," said meteorologist Tim Morrin, of the National Weather Service. "Visibility will be 4) _____ , but by the fog."

Late on Tuesday, flight delays were reported in Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Maryland. Daniel Baker, of flight-tracking service FlightAware, said that most airlines expect to 5) _____ , although further delays were likely.

Some travellers were getting on earlier flights to avoid 6) _____ . Lisa Jablon was originally due to fly on Wednesday morning from New York City to Syracuse, New York state, but she moved her flight to Tuesday night. "I'm flying up to spend the holiday with my boyfriend's family and I didn't want to get stuck," she told the Associated Press news agency.

Thanksgiving Day celebrates the harvest and blessings of the past year. It has been 7) _____ , and is generally thought to commemorate a 1621 harvest feast the pilgrims shared with Indians after settling at Plymouth, in what is now Massachusetts. The modern festival sees millions of people 8)_____ , eat turkey feasts, watch National Football League matches and − in recent years − plan or even begin their assault on the holiday sales.

HOW TO SURVIVE EXTREME COLD

In January 2014 an Arctic freeze swept across North America, bringing temperatures as low as -40°C with wind chill in some cities. What are the risks of extreme cold and how can you avoid them?

Plummeting temperatures and icy winds present two main dangers: hypothermia, in which your body shuts down after reaching an abnormally low temperature, and frostbite. This latter is most common on limbs, but can also affect eyelashes.

Sitting out a cold snap indoors, with plentiful stocks of food, water and medicine, is one possible solution. Taps can be kept open at a drip to stop pipes freezing. Pets can be brought inside.

Many schools and offices in the worst affected areas are closed. But those still needing to make essential trips are advised to wear several layers of loose-fitting clothing and a tightly woven outer layer. Mittens are warmer than gloves. Hand or foot warmers can be placed inside a glove or inside a boot, though these may not heat the tips of fingers or toes.

Goggles or glasses can help keep the temperature around the eyes stable, says John Stone of Survival Systems in Halifax, Canada, though eyelashes are only likely to freeze together if they're wet. Eyeballs, he says, are likely to be fine in these temperatures.

Earrings and facial jewellery should be removed, Mr. Stone added. "The temperature of the metal is going to become very cold very quickly, much more quickly than the skin temperature."

According to our Canadian expert, caffeine and alcohol cause your body to lose heat more rapidly. It's best to seek shelter if you feel your body temperature dropping. Chicago, where temperatures dropped to -27°C in 2014, extended the opening hours at warming centres across the city.

Vehicles, like homes, should be well-stocked with emergency supplies. While petrol freezes at about -60°C, diesel can clog at -10°C and needs to be "winter-weighted". Tyres can freeze solid, which makes for a bumpy start to a journey but is unlikely to damage them, says John Stone. "It's like driving a Fred Flintstone-mobile."

WHY JIM WOLF'S MAKEOVER VIDEO WENT VIRAL*

A time-lapse makeover of a homeless US man has been watched more than 13 million times on YouTube in the past week.

In just two minutes, former soldier Jim Wolf is shown being transformed from tangled-haired and scruffy to well-groomed and sharply-suited and, as a result, visibly more relaxed and self-confident. Encouraged by the makeover, the 54-year-old – who has long struggled against poverty, homelessness and alcoholism – has reportedly started to attend Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

Producer Rob Bliss made the video to raise awareness and funds for a US charity, Degage Ministries, which has received $50,000 in donations as a result.

Mr Wolf's is not the first story of this kind to gain such popularity in social media networks. In September, donations of more than $110,000 poured in for Glen James, a homeless man in Boston, who returned a lost bag containing $26,000 in cash and travellers cheques. Billy Ray Harris, another homeless man was able to buy himself a house with the money given by strangers touched by his honesty after he returned a diamond ring accidentally dropped into his change cup earlier this year.

The release of the Jim Wolf video – timed to coincide with Veterans Day – has focused minds on the issue of homelessness. Even so, Mr Bliss, who makes viral videos for a living, described the response as "pretty incredible" – far outperforming any other content he has produced. "The number one thing that makes a video likely to go viral is the feeling it creates," he told the BBC. "The stronger that feeling, the more successful it will be. This video reminds the audience of the possibility of losing a job, a home, and a stable life. It helps people see the real person behind that bearded needy person – there's a transformation into a person with whom you'd be happy to have a chat," he says.

Task 4

- Read this article about designing book covers and then read the sentences (26-30) that follow.
- Your task is to choose the option (A-D) that best corresponds to what the article says.
- Write the appropriate letters next to the numbers in the white boxes.
- An example (0) has been given for you.

COVER THE BASICS

Whether you're publishing in print or electronically, your cover must make the right impression on readers.

One of the most commonly asked questions on writers' forums these days is: 'How do I create my own book cover?' The simple answer is that if you have to ask that question, then maybe you should consider getting a professional to do it. No matter how good your writing, a good cover is essential to getting decent sales. It is the first thing your potential readers see and an unprofessional job could send them looking for a different book. Often, though, finances are tight.

Whether you are designing the cover yourself or hiring someone who knows what they're doing, there are some essential points to consider in getting the best design for your book.

Show or tell?

What is the cover of your book there to do? On a print copy, of course, you could say that it's there to protect the book as well as to sell it, but with ebooks, the sole reason for a 'cover' is to grab the attention of the potential reader. At the same time, there is no need for overkill. Chip Kidd, the New York book designer famed for the silhouette T-Rex on the cover of the book Jurassic Park (which was later used as an icon for the movie), says, 'A book designer gives form to content but also manages a careful balance between the two.' In essence, he says, the cover is there to tell everyone 'what the story is like'. If your title tells the reader what the book is about − eg. Murder on Smith Street − it is treating your potential audience with contempt to then have a picture of a dead body next to a sign saying 'Smith Street'.

Don't try to tell the whole story

One common cover design error is particularly difficult for authors to overcome: they know their own books too well.

As a result of this, many try to include as much as they can on the cover. This does not sell books. Firstly, the reader is overwhelmed by the confusion and secondly, what may seem like a really important part of your story to you, may mean nothing to a reader before they have read the book. Choose one or two salient points from your story to include and keep it simple. You need to create an emotion in the reader that makes them want to read the book, not tell them what the book is all about.

Show your genre/tone

What images come to mind when you think 'thriller'? Obviously, a pretty vase of flowers is not going to grab you if you're a thriller fan. Break the vase and maybe have a bullet lying in amongst the bent flowers, with blood in place of spilled water, and you have a different cover altogether. It's about giving the reader an idea.

(Writing Magazine)

0)	B

0) A) With electronically printed books the cover is of little interest.
~~B)~~ The reader's reaction to a book cover is of great importance.
C) The cover for an ebook should look different from a print copy.
D) Ebooks and print copies need similar covers to impress the reader.

26)

26) A) Writers are often uncertain about how to design a book cover.
B) Even professionals sometimes make mistakes designing covers.
C) Sales are more influenced by the quality of the writing than the cover.
D) Even if finances are tight, one shouldn't economise on the cover of a book.

27)

27) A) There aren't any rules to observe in designing book covers.
B) Some book covers do not serve their original purpose at all.
C) Ebook and print book covers should look completely different.
D) The essential point about the cover is the same for ebooks and print books.

28)

28) A) Non-professional covers don't give enough protection to print books.
B) Chip Kidd (of Jurassic Park) thinks the cover should make the content clear.
C) Catching the eye of the potential reader is the main purpose of a book cover.
D) Covers are best if they follow the title of the book as closely as possible.

29)

29) A) Writers are often the best designers of the cover as they know their books best.
B) Writers usually know what things from the book interest readers most.
C) Covers work best if they just emphasize a couple of important points.
D) The more details about the story are given on the cover the better.

30)

30) A) A crime story does not need to show blood on the front cover.
B) The cover should be in harmony with the genre of the book.
C) Flowers are out of place if you want thriller fans to notice a book.
D) Spilled water can occasionally be as dramatic as spilled blood.

This is the end of this part of the exam.

Welcome to the Listening component of the Matura Examination.

The listening material and the instructions are recorded on the CD, and the tasks and instructions are printed in your test booklet.

- There are three tasks, and every recording will be played twice.
- The tasks will begin with some music, and then you will hear (and you can also read) the instructions to the task.
- This will be followed by a silent period on the CD in order to give you some time to look at the task in your test booklet before hearing the text.
- Then we will play the recording in one piece.
- After another short silent period we will play the recording for the second time, but now in shorter sections and with breaks between the sections in order to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Please note that the first item in each task (marked with a tick [✓]) is always an example.

The whole test is about 30 minutes long.

Good luck!

TASK 1

- In this section you will hear some information about the White House in Washington D.C.
- Your task will be to decide whether the following statements are true, false or we do not know because the text does not say, and write the appropriate letter in the boxes on the right. Write A if the statement is true, write B if the statement is false, and write C if the text does not say.
- First, you will have some time to look at the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
- Then, you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Task B

You found the following post on an internet forum called Do I have The Right?:

> Alan
>
> I have started my second term in college sharing an apartment with three other guys and I'm coping all right. However, when I last went home for the weekend I had a bitter argument with my mum (fuelled by my stepfather) concerning privacy. It all started when my mum found my name on a list on the homepage of the university and found out that I had changed majors (I took up sociology instead of modern languages). I was really disappointed when they questioned me about it and I told them that they should trust me and rely on what I tell them instead of checking on me like that. Apparently they believe that they should still have a say in everything concerning my studies, including my choice of major, and that they have a right to see my grades. I can understand that they want to be involved (especially as they're paying the bill), and I don't tell them lies, nor do I hide anything from them deliberately but I believe that at 19 I'm supposed to be treated like an adult and given the right to decide what I do and don't want to share with them. I wonder how they would feel if I asked them to call a teacher when I'm having trouble in a class or contact the dean if I have a disciplinary problem? They say that they're giving me 'reasonable guidance' but I see it as intrusion. What do you think?

Write a reply of 200-250 words to Alan in which you include the following:

- which aspects of a university student's life you think parents should have a say in,
- if you agree with Alan in this particular case,
- if you have had or heard of a similar problem.

Begin your reply like this:
