Fontos tudnivalók

- Az utasításokat pontosan kell követni. Csak az utasításban megadott helyre beírt megoldás fogadható el.
- Mindig csak egy megoldást szabad beírni.
- A betűjelek legyenek jól olvashatóak, az esetleges javítások pedig egyértelműek.
- A megadott szószámot nem szabad túllépni. Az összevont alakok egy szónak számítanak (pl. "it's" egy szó, "it is" két szó).

Task 1

- In the following interview with Michael, a hotel manager, the questions have been removed.
- Your task is to match the questions (A- I) and the answers (1-7).
- There is one extra question that you do not need.
- Write the letters in the white boxes as in the example *(0).

0) _____

I run two hotels and a night club. I look after the day-to-day operations, which means everything from the type of tea bag we use to the company accounts.

1) _____

Like most I never planned a career in hospitality but fell into it and found a passion.

2) _____

The interaction with people is the most satisfying part of my job. After all, no two people are the same.

3) _____

That I am not able to meet all the clients; even though our team is dedicated to making their stay as enjoyable as possible, I would like to see them all.

4) _____

Patience! You deal with young unskilled staff a lot of the time, not to mention the untrained guests! You also have to be prepared to work hard.

5) _____

I don't think I could name just one person. I try to learn and take something from everyone I come into contact with, even those who at the time, I may not think I will gain anything positive from.

6) _____

They should be very happy with the welcome they receive and reassured at the same time that they have chosen well.

7) _____

Start at the bottom, work hard and prove yourself. Moving up the ladder is all about gaining experience and constantly learning from others. Keep up to date with the ever-changing industry.

- Write the letters in the white boxes next to the numbers as in the example (0).

BUCKINGHAM PALACE HOSTS ITS FIRST FOOTBALL MATCH

Buckingham Palace has held its first official football match to mark the Football Association's 150th anniversary. The event was the idea of FA president Prince William.

London side Civil Service Football Club, the only surviving team of 11 that formed the Football Association on 26th October 1863, lost 2-1 against Polytechnic FC, set up in 1875.

At half-time, palace staff carried water, orange slices and chocolate bars onto the pitch for the players. During the second half, the prince and Michael Owen, a former England striker, joined in a training session with royal staff.

The prince, who presented medals to 150 volunteers before the kick-off, recognised the efforts of the founders of local clubs, coaches, referees and other officials at a reception to celebrate the anniversary on 7th October. The prince told the guests, "Over its 150 years, football has remained a wonderful example of the power of community and of our ability to come together to organise and to enjoy a simple pastime."

The Queen gave permission for the match to take place at the palace. The prince joked: "Today we will be playing football on my grandmother's lawn. One warning, though – if anyone breaks a window, you can answer to her."

Wembley groundsman Tony Stones worked with royal household gardeners to create the pitch in the 39-acre garden. The lawn had to be repaired following garden parties and the Coronation Festival in the summer.

Civil Service FC were selected to take part in the game and they suggested Polytechnic, also based in Chiswick, west London, as opponents. Polytechnic FC manager said: "We first played 120 years ago – so there's a fair bit of history between the two of us."

Task 3

- Read this text about a journalist's visit to a book festival and then look at the half sentences that follow.
- Your task is to match the two sentence halves according to the information in the text (numbers 15-21 to letters A-I). There is an extra letter that you do not need.
- Write the letters in the white boxes. An example (0) has been given for you.

VISITING A BOOK FESTIVAL IN ICELAND WHERE ONE IN 10 PEOPLE WILL PUBLISH A BOOK

Iceland is experiencing a book boom. This island nation of just over 300,000 people has more writers, more books published and more books read, per head, than anywhere else in the world. It is hard to avoid writers in Reykjavik, the capital city, hosting the festival I visited.

"Does it get rather competitive?" I ask the young novelist, Kristin Eirikskdottir. "Yes. Especially as I live with my mother and partner, who are also full-time writers. But we try to publish in alternate years so we do not compete too much."

Special saga tours show us public buildings, on the walls of which you can see some of these old stories. Dating from the 13th Century, Icelandic sagas tell the stories of the country's Norse settlers, who began to arrive on the island in the late 9th Century. Sagas are written on napkins and coffee cups. Our guide stands up mid-tour to recite his own poetry – our taxi driver's father and grandfather write biographies.

Reykjavik is flooded with writers when it is book festival time. "They write everything - modern sagas, poetry, children's books, literary and erotic fiction - but the biggest boom is in crime writing," Agla Magnusdottir, head of the new Icelandic Literature Centre, tells me. That is perhaps no surprise in this Nordic nation. "Writers are respected here, they live well. Some even get a salary."

She also tells us about Iceland's Nobel Literature Laureate, Halldor Laxness, whose books are sold in petrol stations and tourist centres. Locals name their cats after Laxness and visit his home. "When Laxness won the Nobel Prize in 1955 he put modern Icelandic literature on the map," she tells me. "He gave us confidence to write."

But some fear a book crisis, too. Iceland has so many writers that there is huge pressure on publishers.

Suddenly I notice some famous people. One of them, Iceland's musical superstar Bjork attends several of the festival events. "It is a small place. We have grown up together," she says. "We support each other."

SPAIN TO CHANGE TIME ZONE

Spanish MPs are to consider changing time zones by an hour after a report said that (0) _____ . The document by a parliamentary commission said that for more than 71 years (22) _____ . In 1942, the Spanish dictator General Franco moved Spain onto Central European Time because (23) _____ .

The report says Spain should be in the same time zone as the UK and Portugal. However – situated on the western edge of Europe – it is currently one hour ahead of GMT during the winter and (24) _____ .

"We sleep almost an hour less than (25) _____ ," the commission said. "All this has a negative effect on productivity, stress, accidents and school drop-out rates." It said that following the "wrong clock" explained why Spaniards tended to eat, leave work and go to bed later than (26) _____ .

The text said their timetable is determined more by the sun than by the clock. They eat at one o'clock in the afternoon and dine at eight, according to the sun, but (27) _____ . It added that jumping back an hour would bring Spain into line with Europe in many ways in which (28) _____ .

When he was asked about the plan, Javier, a student from Madrid, commented: "What the hell, you can change the hours to Pacific Standard Time and (29) _____ . The Spanish will always find a way to work less, eat later, party harder. They have built a culture and a reputation around their ungodly hours. And I really don't think that (30) _____ and the tourism it generates because of a technicality."

Task A

You are spending a month in Manchester and you've asked your British friend Stan about the sights that are worth seeing. He sent you a picture of the Museum of Science and Industry and this is what he writes about it:

We stumbled on this museum and it would have been great to explore all the exhibitions. Unfortunately we only had time for the Cotton Mill, which was fascinating, with the guides talking about the history of the cotton industry, and we could even see several machines working. You'd love it, I'm sure – but try to plan at least half a day for the visit. You won't be disappointed.

Write an email of 50-80 words to Stan in which you

- thank your friend for the suggestion and say why you like it,
- ask about the other exhibitions in the museum,
- ask about opening hours and entrance fees.

Task B

You read the following post on the internet forum Q&A:

I've got an 18-year-old sister called Becky; she's leaving school this year and going to university. I got a little worried when I found brochures from various banks in her room and she said that she was thinking of taking out a bank loan. She's even visited the website of one of the banks and said that she "found the adverts for student loans very convincing".

I know that many young people do the same for their university fees. But this is not the case with her because our parents have saved up the money. Actually, what she wants is "financial independence". She is planning to rent a flat with her friends who come from much wealthier families, but our family simply can't afford this! I think it's very dangerous to get into debt these days – and also very foolish if you don't really have to. But when I tried talking to her about it, she said I was just being jealous.

Is there anything I should do? I'd appreciate your opinion.
