Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my appreciation to some kind individual who was shopping at Lidl in Dewsbury last Wednesday.

I am a 69-year-old retired gentleman. I was taking my elderly uncle shopping at Lidl, as I do every week. After taking my uncle home and getting home myself, I realised that I had misplaced the bag that I normally carry around my waist containing my money and my personal belongings. I thought that this would be the last time it was seen!

However, I called the supermarket and to my surprise some kind person had found it by the door in the supermarket and handed it in to the cashier, complete with £30 and everything untouched.

Our town has had such a bad press recently. This goes to show that there are still kind, caring, genuine people about and I would like to say how proud of my community I am.

I am one very happy gentleman.

Yours faithfully,

R. McG.

THE GREAT NURSERY ESCAPE

Two boys aged five dug under the fence of their Russian kindergarten playground in order to walk to a Jaguar car showroom to buy a 'grown-up car'. After using their sand spades over several days to dig their 'tunnel', the boys escaped from under their teacher's nose during an afternoon walk.

They then walked several miles to the Jaguar showroom in the Urals industrial city of Magnitogorsk. As police hunted for the friends, a woman noticed them looking at the expensive sports cars and asked them what they were doing. They happily told her they were there because their daddies' cars were so similar to the ones they could see in the shop window, The Siberian Times reported. Eventually, the woman handed the boys over to the police.

Their worried parents decided not to complain at the shop when they realised that the children were safe. But the kindergarten teacher in charge of the boys was fired. As Olga Denisenko, Head of Pre-School Education in the city, explained: 'This is a very serious violation of rules. The head of the group that allowed this to happen had to leave.'

Sadly for the boys, they didn't get their dream car, but they did have a couple of hours of freedom.

> I'm eager to go but there is no way my host parents will let me go if they realise the parents are out of town. My friends are telling me just not to say anything and only lie if they directly ask me about adults being at the party. OK, but what if I'm caught lying? It'll ruin our relationship and make the rest of my stay hell. What do you think?

- whether you think this is a serious dilemma,
- what you think she should do,
- how your parents would react if you wanted to go to a party like this.

Begin your email like this:
