KETCHUP ON MY TROUSERS!

An email exchange between a senior lawyer and a secretary at a London law firm over a £4 dry cleaning bill has made the news in the international media. Here is the original email from Richard Phillips, the lawyer and the bitterly ironic answer from Jenny Amner, one of the secretaries at the firm.

From: Phillips, Richard
Sent: 25 May 2005 15:27
To: Amner, Jenny
Subject: Ketchup trousers

Hi Jenny

I went to a dry cleaner's shop at lunch and they said it would cost £4 to remove the ketchup stains. If you could let me have the cash today, that would be much appreciated.

Thanks

Richard

Cc: *LONDON - ALL USERS 3RD FLOOR
Subject: RE: Ketchup trousers

With reference to your email, I must apologise for not getting back to you straight away but due to my mother's sudden illness, death and funeral I have had more important problems than your £4.

I apologise again for accidentally getting a few splashes of ketchup on your trousers. Clearly your financial need as a senior associate is greater than mine as a simple secretary. After I spoke to various partners, lawyers and trainees, and showed them your email, they kindly offered to start a collection to raise the £4. I, however, didn't accept their kind offer – but if you feel an urgent need for the £4, it will be on my desk this afternoon.

Jenny

0) The incident has been reported in several countries.

1) The dry cleaners would clean Richard's trousers for £4.

2) The dry cleaner's shop was right next to Richard's office.

3) Richard wanted Jenny to pay the £4 on the day he wrote the email.

4) Jenny replied to Richard's request as soon as it was sent.

5) In her current situation Richard's trousers didn't seem very significant to Jenny.

6) Jenny's mother died in an accident.

7) Jenny said she was sorry about spilling ketchup on Richard's trousers.

8) Jenny's colleagues felt that she shouldn't pay the £4 herself.

9) Jenny decided to leave the money in Richard's office.

Task B

You have received the following email from your British friend Annie:

My nephew Peter is having his birthday soon (turning 11) and I'd like to buy him a present. Having no brothers myself, I've no idea what boys like. (I'm sure he has all the equipment for the outdoor activities he enjoys doing.) The only thing I can think of is a boardgame because, as you know, me and my family love them and the way they bring the whole family (literally from 0 to 99 years!) together around the table. In the one I've chosen players have to design various labyrinths that other players will have to go through, which needs strategic thinking, not just mere luck.

IF Peter likes boardgames at all, he might find this one challenging (and fun for the rest of the family). Or am I completely on the wrong track? What do you think?
