- Remember that there are two extra phrases that you will not need.

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR PUBLIC SPEAKING

Many people panic at the thought of talking to a large audience, (0) _____ .

Public speaking can make even the most confident person scared. But today, you don't even have to be a manager to give presentations – staff at every level are expected to stand up (9) _____ . Below you can read some advice from experts.

"I always begin my planning with the end in mind," says Karen Glossop, psychologist. "What are the one or two main points (10) _____ ? Plan the talk around your main points and build the structure accordingly."

Another expert, who coaches people in communication and presentation skills, suggests that you should make your speech memorable. "Create an opening that grabs attention (11) _____ . We naturally remember the first and last bits better than the middle."

When clients tell him that they don't have time to prepare, he advises them to spend just 10 minutes thinking about what it is they want to say: "What is the one thing you want people to take away? When your audience leaves the room, (12) _____ ? That way you will structure your message well."

The most important thing is to remember your main ideas and not the exact words, says the president of the Academy of Public Speakers. "Prepare in advance (13) _____ . While doing so, focus on the message rather than trying to remember every single word in order," he says. "As no one will know exactly (14) _____ , leaving out a word will not cause a problem."

"When you practise, include any slides, flip charts, aids or props (15) _____ ," he adds. How you present your speech is equally, or maybe even more important than what you say. Speaking slowly and clearly is very important. Don't rush through your talk, no matter how much (16) _____ . "Taking time to pause and breathe helps the speaker to feel less stressed, and helps support the voice".

Psychologists say we should never turn down a chance to speak. We should find a safe place like a school theatre group, where we can get feedback from our friends to overcome fears.

(www.theguardian.com)

A) in order to have enough opportunity to practise

B) I want the audience to leave with

~~C) but preparation and breathing techniques can help you feel relaxed~~

D) and talk about the achievements of their teams

E) whether you enjoy the experience

F) in order to help to illustrate the points you're making

G) what is it that you want them to remember, think or do

H) you want it to be over

I) but doing so is brilliant for our careers

K) and an ending that gives the audience a takeaway

SANTAS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD MEET

With just five months until Christmas, Santas from around the world are gathering in Copenhagen for a mid-season break at World Santa Claus Congress, which is organised every summer.

The annual conference gives them a chance to network, meet the public and get into shape for the busy days in December. Santa Cherry from Canada, who is taking part for the fifth time, said there was much more to being a Santa than just the clothes.

"A successful Santa is not just about the costumes and the clothes. You have to be caring to be a really successful Santa and it's not something you can make up," she said.

The World Santa Claus Congress has taken place at the Bakken amusement park near Copenhagen since 1957 and always in the summer, which is Santa's off season. During the congress they have the opportunity to discuss important questions concerning their job, such as the value of the presents, the length of Santa's beard and the delivery of the presents. The most problematic question seems to be the exact date when Santa should bring the presents.

The most important part of the meeting is for the professional Santas to meet the public. Apart from parades there is also some sightseeing, Christmas cake baking and storytelling for the children. On the last day, Santas have to compete in a race.

0) The global meeting for Santas is held in Copenhagen every two years.

0)	B

17) The congress has three main aims.

18)
19)

20) The Bakken amusement park is very popular among Santas.

21) Santas have debates about questions such as how much they should spend on the presents.

22) Santas are in general agreement about when Santa should arrive with the presents.

23) Santas take part in a competition during the congress.

US SAILORS RESCUED AFTER FIVE MONTHS IN PACIFIC

Two US yachtswomen and their two dogs have been rescued after spending nearly five months lost in the Pacific Ocean.

Jennifer Appel and Tasha Fuiaba say they were on their way in a small sailing boat from Hawaii to Tahiti when their engine, damaged by a storm, failed. Their boat then drifted in the open seas about 1,500km southeast of Japan, they said. They were rescued after a fishing boat alerted US authorities.

The pair said they set off in May and their engine broke down at the end of that month. They originally thought they would be able to reach land with the help of only wind and sails. Ms Appel said they sent SOS signals daily for nearly 100 days but received no response. "It was very depressing and very hopeless, but it's the only thing you can do, so you do what you can," she said.

But on 24 October, a Taiwanese fishing boat saw their boat drifting in the ocean and contacted authorities on the US territory of Guam. The USS Ashland arrived early the following day to rescue the sailors and their two four-legged companions. They said they managed to survive this nightmare thanks to a water purifier and a year's worth of dry goods such as muesli and pasta.

"The US Navy saved our lives," Ms Appel said. "The pride and smiles we had when we saw them on the horizon were pure relief."

Task 2

You have read the following post on an internet forum called Teen Advice:

Hi guys, I'm seeking advice about my sister, Rosie, who's permanently in debt. She's 22, has a fulltime job but keeps asking people for money, practically every week. She gives us excuses such as "I need to buy my travelcard today…, please please help me out just this once."

I didn't really worry when she just asked me or her close friends but now I've discovered that she even asks old friends from school who she hasn't spoken to in at least 5 years, and who knows who else.

The weird thing is that I don't SEE expensive things or new clothes or anything. So I don't know what she spends the money on. I'm desperate to help her, before she gets into serious trouble. I hope it's not too late… I would appreciate your ideas about it all and what you think I could do to help her get out of it.
