"WE WENT, WE SAW, WE DID IT!"

Here are some reviews that young people have written after doing voluntary work all over the world.

Hsina

I was very excited to return to Warsaw as a mentor after 10 years. However, this time it was a different experience as now many Polish people spoke English very well. The two-week programme was at a hotel outside of Warsaw, where I met lovely mentees.

Skylar

I had a once-in-a-lifetime experience volunteering in India! I only signed up for 2 weeks but ended up extending my trip to 4 weeks. I even have plans to come back in the future. I did medical volunteering and was able to distribute medication to locals.

Amy

I went to South Africa for the animals, but the highlight of my experience were the friends I made during my trip. I worked with so many likeminded people of various backgrounds. The accommodation was definitely basic, but I didn't mind this; I found it added to the experience.

Kinelam

The organizers of the language camp in Germany promised us fun and relaxed work experience. However, this was far from reality. For the seven days at the camp, we worked all day from 9 am to 9 pm. No time or energy to enjoy the facilities of the camp, which was otherwise surprisingly pleasant and well-managed.

David

Good experience for teaching and being social. The programme takes place in the Turkish countryside, which is great, but do not expect to see lots of places during your stay. Having food and accommodation paid for is a huge up.

Alec

I spent 3 weeks volunteering at an elephant camp in Thailand. The chance to work with the elephants and interact with the visitors is unforgettable. The staff were helpful and also arranged fun activities outside of work. Unfortunately, I was the only volunteer staying there at the time, so the volunteer house itself was a bit empty.

	A) felt stressed by having to work long hours.	0)	C
0) Hsina ...	B) missed interacting with other volunteers.	16)
16) Skylar …	~~C) had already been to the country where s/he volunteered.~~
17) Amy …	D) was disappointed by the living conditions and the service.	17)
18) Kinelam …	E) enjoyed forming connections with fellow workers.	18)
19) David …	F) stayed longer than s/he had originally planned.	19)
20) Alec …	G) had conflicts with his/her host family.	20)
	H) does not recommend the programme for people who wish to do sightseeing.
	I) has already booked another voluntary programme for next year.

STUDY HACKS AGAINST PROCRASTINATION

If you've ever struggled with putting off tasks until the last minute, i.e. procrastinating, here are a few tips to help you drop this habit.

Try a new spot. (0) _____ If yesterday's math lesson still isn't clicking, go to a coffee shop or sit out in the park while you review your notes. Changing your environment in-between study sessions will boost motivation and stop boredom.

(21) _____ Whether it's a much-needed trip to your favourite café or a chapter of a just-for-fun book, it's important to treat yourself for meeting goals and checking things off your to-do list.

Identify time wasters. (22) _____ Set a five-minute time limit on the app that distracts you most. Or even put your phone somewhere that's out of reach. (23) _____

Break large projects into smaller ones. With each project, decide which steps you need to take to complete the task. (24) _____ Remember to create reasonable deadlines for these smaller projects, too, so you aren't writing an entire essay the night before the day it's due.

Manage your time wisely. Set a timer for 25 minutes and start doing your work. When the timer goes off, take a 5-minute break. (25) _____ When your fourth break arrives, take a half-hour break.

Set lots of reminders. If sticky notes work best for you, write down important deadlines on those. (26) _____ If you always have your phone with you, set reminders on your phone for each important event.

0)	C

A) Once you can't see it, focusing on what's in front of you will be easier.

B) Give yourself a reward after each completed task.

~~C) Studying becomes tiring when you've been sitting at your desk for hours on end.~~

D) Then, as much as possible, stick to those routines.

E) Notice what steals your attention while you're studying.

F) Put your books, notes, and other essential items in the same place every time.

G) Stress reduces your ability to plan wisely.

H) Repeat this cycle until you hit two full hours.

I) A complicated task becomes much easier to manage in smaller chunks.

K) Place them where you can always see them.

Task 2

You have come across the following post on TeenLine.

My name is Annabel, and I've found myself in a situation I can't seem to deal with on my own.

I bought some really expensive headphones, which I'd been saving up for for quite a long time. Since my parents told me they were not something they were willing to buy for me, I had to put aside some money every week for three months to have enough to buy them. Eventually, I did, and I was over the moon, of course, and really felt it was worth it.

Last week, my cousin Patrick asked if he could borrow them for his class trip, where he wanted to listen to music on the train ride. Imagine my outrage and disappointment when instead of phoning, he just texted me that he had lost my brand new headphones. He didn't even apologise or tell me how it happened, moreover, he completely ghosted me. He isn't answering my texts or returning my calls at all since he told me.

What shall I do? Don't I deserve an explanation, an apology, or a new headset, for that matter? Any advice, anyone?

Annabel, 17
