Task 1

- In the following article about a new Australian law, the headings of the paragraphs have been removed.
- Your task is to write the letters of the titles (A-K) next to the appropriate numbers (1-6).
- There are three extra headings that you do not need.
- Write the letters in the white boxes as in the example (0).

AUSTRALIA'S SOCIAL MEDIA BAN

(0) _____
There are an estimated 440,000 young Australian teens on Snapchat. On Instagram, 350,000 of that age group are active users, and on TikTok, 200,000. On December 10th, 2025, those numbers drastically changed under a landmark law that requires users in Australia to be at least 16 to have accounts on social media services.

(1) _____
The platforms currently affected by the law are Facebook, Instagram, Kick, Reddit, Snapchat, Threads, TikTok, Twitch, X and YouTube. Other services widely used by young teens were excluded, because Australia's eSafety commissioner deemed them to be primarily for messaging or gaming.

(2) _____
The burden is on the tech companies to deactivate younger users by utilizing age estimation and verification technologies in addition to the user's self-reported age. Regulators have said the companies may rely on factors like how long the account has been active, whether it interacts with other underage users, or facial or voice analysis.

(3) _____
Tech companies have criticized the law as being rushed and poorly designed, saying teens will no longer benefit from features they have been introducing to make their platforms a safer place, like parental controls. Most have said they still intend to comply with the law.

(4) _____
There are no punishments for children or parents who continue to access social media after the law takes effect. The companies, however, can face fines of up to 50 million Australian dollars for not taking reasonable steps to prevent users younger than 16 from having accounts on their platforms.

(5) _____
In promoting the law, Australian officials have highlighted concerns about social media being a vehicle for online bullying, an amplifier of anxiety, a conduit of peer pressure and a tool for potential predators.

(6) _____
In a large-scale survey of 9- to 16-year-olds by the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, the nation's public broadcaster, the vast majority of teens said that they did not think the ban would work. Three-quarters of all of the children polled said they planned on continuing to use social media.

DO LABELS IMPACT HOW WE EAT?

You've likely heard the argument to eat less meat for the health of the planet. That's because red meat production (0) _____ , and it's responsible for a significant amount of greenhouse gas emissions. Studies claim that if people swapped out 30 percent of the beef, lamb and goat meat they eat in favour of plant-based options, it could (7) _____ necessary by 2050.

But if you're an omnivore starving while staring at a menu, it can be hard for the future of planet Earth to (8) _____ . The language for meat, and beef in particular, sounds delicious, and labels like "meat free," "vegan" and "vegetarian" (9) _____ . These terms don't create positive associations with how the food is going to taste.

A recent report by the World Resources Institute suggests that food companies should (10) _____ — which tend to make consumers feel like they're missing out — and more on their flavour, mouthfeel and origin, using words that (11) _____ .

Fast-casual chain Panera Bread had a "vegetarian black bean soup" on the menu. Customers who tried it seemed to like it, but the name didn't (12) _____ . So, Panera tried out a couple of options to see if they could make that soup sound more appealing. When they rebranded it as "Cuban black bean soup" in a test at 18 stores, sales went up 13 percent. “Vegetarian” doesn’t sound highly craveable, but “Cuban” makes people (13) _____, which makes them hungry. When the British supermarket chain Sainsbury's rebranded its "meat-free sausage and mash" as "Cumberland-spiced veggie sausage and mash" — a name that (14) _____ — sales went up by a whopping 76 percent.

Several food companies are now doing similar name testing for vegetarian menu items. Words like "Tuscan," and "grilled" may convince more customers (15) _____ .

Task 3

- Read this article about planning a trip with AI and then read the statements (16-23) following it.
- Mark a sentence A if it is true according to the article.
- Mark it B if it is false.
- Mark it C if there isn't enough information in the text to decide if the sentence is true or not.
- Write the letters in the white boxes next to the numbers as in the example (0).

THE DANGERS OF LETTING AI PLAN YOUR NEXT TRIP

In just a few years, artificial intelligence (AI) tools like ChatGPT, Microsoft Copilot and Google Gemini have gone from a mere novelty to an integral part of trip planning for millions of people. 30% of travellers are now using AI tools and dedicated travel AI sites to help organise their trips.

While these programs can offer valuable travel tips, they can also lead people into some frustrating or even dangerous situations by providing incorrect information or steering them to a place that was created by the hard-wired imagination of a robot. A 2024 BBC article reported that AI trip planner Layla told users that there was an Eiffel Tower in Beijing and suggested a marathon route across Northern Italy that was entirely unfeasible. According to a 2024 survey, 37% of those who used AI to help plan their travels reported that it could not provide enough information, while around 33% complained their AI-generated recommendations included false information.

These issues stem from how AI generates its answers. According to Rayid Ghani, a professor in machine learning, large language models like ChatGPT work by analysing massive collections of text and putting together words and phrases that, statistically, feel like appropriate responses. Sometimes this provides perfectly accurate information, other times, you get what AI experts call a "hallucination". However, it's often difficult for users to distinguish between the two. Recently, a young couple made the trek to a scenic cable car in Malaysia that they had seen on TikTok, only to find that no such structure existed. The video they'd watched had been entirely AI generated.

Currently, authorities are attempting to regulate how AI presents information to users, e.g. by including watermarks or other distinguishing features so viewers know when something has been altered or generated by AI. If these kinds of regulations do pass, they could make it easier for travellers to detect AI-generated images or videos.

One thing Ghani suggests is to be as specific as possible in your queries and verify absolutely everything. If an AI tool gives you a travel suggestion that sounds a little too perfect, double check it. Ironically, the time spent verifying AI information can easily make the process just as laborious as planning your trip the old-fashioned way.

0) AI tools have been used for trip planning for a few years now.	0)	A
16) The majority of tourists tend to turn to AI to plan their trips.	16)
17) Using AI for planning one's trip is mostly popular with younger tourists.	17)
18) AI tools may direct travellers to non-existent attractions.	18)
19) It is possible that an AI tool misleads tourists by misplacing a famous sight.	19)
20) It is usually evident for users whether AI informs them accurately about their searches.	20)
21) Regular users of AI are familiar with the term "hallucination".	21)
22) No measures are planned to introduce rules on AI tools.	22)
23) In order not to be misled by AI tools, users need to use other sources when they search for information.	23)

Task 4

- Read this article about sharing meals.
- Some sentences have been left out from the text.
- Your task is to reconstruct the text by filling in the gaps (24-29) from the list (A-I) below.

WHY HUMANS ENJOY A GOOD FEAST TOGETHER

For thousands of years, humans have come together in small groups to feast on food. (0) _____

We like to sit down together for a good tuck-in. Meals out with friends, dinner parties, holiday get-togethers where we regularly overindulge are all events we can relate to. (24) _____

Sharing food as a behaviour is likely to go back to before the origin of our species. But giving food to those closest to you is not the same as having a meal together. Chimpanzees and bonobos, two of our closest primate relatives, also share food with their social groups. Humans seem to have added a number of complex social layers to this act.

(25) _____ But no one is certain exactly when they first learned to cook. (26) _____ But when someone has gone to the trouble of hunting or gathering food, putting together a fire, and then cooking over it, it implies that they may have a social group to help them with the many stages of this process. (27) _____ As Robin Dunbar, an anthropologist at the University of Oxford found, those extra hours may have been golden opportunities for social bonding over food.

Whatever the details of its origins, eating meals together is linked to higher wellbeing, Dunbar found in a 2017 study that asked people living in the UK how often they ate meals with others. (28) _____

“Eating triggers the brain's endorphin system, which is responsible for bonding between primates and humans,” Dunbar says. Eating together as a group enhances the endorphin effect in the same way that jogging together does. (29) _____

0)	C

A) Moreover, eating alone regularly results in loneliness and depression.

B) Sharing meals is one of the most universal human activities.

~~C) Why is it important and why do we still continue the tradition?~~

D) Estimates vary wildly, with the oldest suggested date being 1.8 million years ago.

E) Its results suggest that eating with others more frequently correlates with greater satisfaction in life and having more friends to rely on for support.

F) However, sharing a meal with someone you don't like does not guarantee you will get on better afterwards.

G) And once you are all seated around that fire, a warm, bright beacon in the darkness, you may find yourself staying awake later.

H) This is because synchronised activity significantly increases endorphin output.

I) The first meal shared by humans may have taken place around a campfire.

THE INDIAN OCEAN'S 'PARADISE ON EARTH'

On a recent visit to Perth, I mentioned to a local that I was (0) _____ (head) to Rottnest Island the next day. She sighed wistfully. "I love it there," she said. "You're going to love it too. It has a special kind of magic – everything slows down and you can (1) _____ (breath) a little more deeply." And she was right. Rottnest Island has been (4) _____ (famous) car-free since 1931, and when I stepped off the ferry I found myself in another world. People immediately jumped onto bikes they'd brought with them or wandered off to hire one from Pedal and Flipper, which is the largest bike hire place in the southern hemisphere.

There was no (5) _____ (urban) noise, no traffic and nothing to worry about. It was idyllic and (6) _____ (glory) and everything I imagined a nostalgic care-free (and car-free) island holiday to be.

Once a well-kept secret from the rest of the world, in recent years Rottnest has become one of Australia's most Instagrammed destinations, (7) _____ (thank) to a certain fuzzy-faced (8) _____ (reside): the quokka.

Quokkas – tiny marsupials found only in this small pocket of south-western Australia – seem to smile for selfies in a way that feels almost staged. "Rotto", as locals call it, became the hottest ticket in town, transforming from local secret to global sensation.

CHICKEN TIKKA MASALA: BRITAIN'S FAVOURITE CURRY

Few dishes better capture the story of Britain's relationship with "foreign" food (0) _____ chicken tikka masala. Its roots (10) _____ northern India, where pieces of chicken were marinated in yoghurt, spices and acid, (11) _____ cooked in a fiery oven. Served as dry tikka, it had a strong, smoky and spicy taste. But when Indian and South Asian chefs began opening restaurants in postwar Britain, they found people preferred mild dishes with sauce (12) _____ very spicy or strong flavours. (13) _____ began the slow alchemy that turned tikka into tikka masala – the chicken in sauce – a bridge between two gastronomic worlds.

Legend (14) _____ its birth to a Glasgow curry house in the 1970s, where a dissatisfied customer found his chicken tikka too dry. The chef responded (15) _____ mixing a tin of tomato soup, cream and spices, and ladling it over the meat. The trick worked: the dish quickly became a bestseller. Welcome to the Listening component of the Matura Examination.

The listening material and the instructions are recorded on this CD, and the tasks and instructions are printed in your test booklet.

- There will be three tasks, and every recording will be played twice.
- The tasks will begin with some music, and then you will hear (and you can also read) the instructions to the task.
- This will be followed by a silent period on the CD in order to give you some time to look at the task in your test booklet before hearing the text.
- Then we will play the recording in one piece.
- After another short silent period, we will play the recording for the second time, but now in shorter sections and with breaks between the sections in order to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Please note that the first item in each task (marked with a tick [✓]) is always an example.

The whole test is exactly 30 minutes long.

Good luck!

TASK 1

- In this section you will hear a teacher's account of an activity she did with her class.
- Your task is to complete the sentences with two words indicated by the gaps, using the exact words you hear in the recording.
- First, you will have some time to study the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
- Then, you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.

That is the end of TASK 2.

TASK 3

- In this section you will hear an interview with Steven Spielberg, the director of Jurassic Park and other big movie blockbusters.
- Your task will be to decide whether the following statements are true, false or we do not know because the text does not say, and write the appropriate letter in the boxes on the right. Write A if the statement is true, write B if the statement is false, and write C if the text does not say.
- First, you will have some time to study the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
- Then, you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.
- A = TRUE B = FALSE C = THE TEXT DOES NOT SAY

✓ Steven Spielberg is a very private man and rarely does interviews. C

Task 2

You have found the following post on the internet forum 7 Cups:

As a child, I saw that drinking alcohol was something adults sometimes did, and as I got older (I'm 19 now), I understood the appeal of my mom and dad's occasional gin and tonic or glass of wine.

My girlfriend Rosie and I started dating when we were both in our last year at school. It was clear from the very beginning that although we had many things in common, enjoying a drink would never be one of them. She simply "didn't like the taste of alcohol", in any form. It didn't take me long to realise that it wasn't just her but her whole family, as when I was invited for lunch in their home, I found that there were only soft drinks and tap water on the table. When I brought up the topic later, she said it was simply a lifestyle choice that they all shared.

Luckily, she didn't mind if I ordered a beer with my food in a restaurant and I didn't mind drinking alone either, it has become a natural state of being. Until her sister's wedding… It turned out that I would accompany Rosie, who would be one of the bridesmaids. She told me about the whole ceremony, adding that as I would appear at the dinner party as part of their family, she hoped that, in spite of cocktails and champagne being served for other guests, I would be able to refrain from drinking alcohol in front of her parents and close relatives. It would be very disappointing, even upsetting for her parents to see, as she never told them about this 'habit of mine'. A habit??? As if I was an alcoholic who regularly ended up blind drunk at social events?

I simply don't know what to do now. I still love Rosie but I can't help feeling bad about what she said. What do you think?

Write a comment of 200-250 words to Norman's post in which you tell him

- how much you think different family norms and habits matter in a relationship,
- if you have ever heard of similar differences causing problems,
- if you think Norman is right to feel offended,
- what he should do now.
